This song was written and recorded in response to the coronavirus crisis, and current guidance from the NHS on the correct methods for washing little hands!

Forget singing happy birthday twice...

We are ALL about using music and song to support parents, carers and teachers in their everyday challenges, and the simple act of washing little ones' hands multiple times a day is going to be one such challenge!

All you need:

The song demonstrates each stage of handwashing, complete with a 20 second timer!

For classrooms:

SONG

We'd love for you to use the song (for free) in your settings! Watch the video \(or listen\) in your setting as well as use it to accompany the hand washing process... It's a handy 1 minute long.

If you don't want to think about hitting repeat, then we have a 10 minute version available here!

POSTER

We also have an accompanying free poster attached which you might like to print and stick up near the sinks, by our resident artist, Claire Fauche.

About London Rhymes:

London Rhymes is a community music project that has been running for 5 years, working with family groups with young children across London, singing and making music together and writing new, relevant and high quality rhymes and songs. Our projects are supported and managed by charity Creative Futures and have received significant funding from a number of sources over the years (National Lottery, Youth Music and more). In 2019 we launched our YouTube channel with funding from The Space, generating 100K views in our first week of launching.

A reinvention of the traditional nursery rhyme, our collection of songs are a true collaboration between families, children and professional musicians.
